CHAPTER 44 - END

Translation Notes

Daifuku mochi, page 9

A type of mochi (sticky rice cake) that is filled with something sweet; usually anko (red bean paste), but other flavorings like strawberry are common as well.

TV comedians, page 35-37

The comedians on TV are very clear (non-parodized) depictions of actual, famous comedians seen all over TV in Japan. The two members of the duo Bananaman, Shitara (parted hair) and Himura (with the rounded Beatles bowl cut), are seated on the right end of the row of panels, while next to them with the big smile and closed eyes is the solo comedian Bakarhythm.

Becky, page 72

An extremely popular television personality and actress in Japan, known only by her first name. In addition to her good looks and cheerful personality, Becky is known for being extremely knowledgeable and well-spoken. While there's not enough evidence to tell exactly what show the character is referencing in this scene (as Becky appears on TV constantly), it is most likely the program Monitoring: Human Observation, a hidden-camera variety show in which Becky and the other stars on the show confront their unsuspecting targets with surprising, baffling, or subtle events to see how they react, or if they even notice.

Yakisoba, page 99

Meaning “cooked soba,” yakisoba is a common summertime dish of soba (buckwheat) noodles fried in a savory sauce with pork, ginger and chopped nori.

Taketomi & Hoshino, page 156

The island of Taketomi is one of the small subtropical Yaeyama Islands associated with Okinawa, a common vacation destination for Japanese living on the main four islands of Japan. Hoshino Resorts is a company that melds modern resorts with the traditional Japanese inn (ryokan) style, and their recently opened Hoshinoya Okinawa resort is located on Taketomi and features an architectural design similar to traditional Okinawan style.
